

Something in common.....

Mr Twigley is a thin man that looks like a twig on a tree.

One day, he goes to the park for an outing.

While he was having his lunch, he noticed a small creature moving in the bushes.

He looked closely and saw a tiny snail sitting on a small rock surrounded by green leaves.

Mr Twigley asked the snail, "Would you like some chocolate?"

The snail, whose name was Gorges replied, "snails do not eat chocolate. We eat leaves and roots of a plant."

"Oh! So we have something in common. Humans also eat leaves and roots of a plant." remarked Mr Twigley.

"Really, I did not know that," answered Gorges in a surprised tone.

Yes, we eat onion, carrot, beetroot and turnip. These are all roots.

"And what about leaves? Which leaves do you eat?"

inquired the curious snail.

"We eat spinach, corriander and kale too." replied Mr Twigley.

"Is that why you are slim?" asked Gorges.

"Yes, that is the reason why I am so healthy," replied Mr Twigley.

"Me too." Smiled Gorges.

Moral – eat your greens.
