

THE MYTH OF US

FASHOLA TUNJI

Have you ever wondered why the world is so big? Or why the sky is so far from land? Why the sun shines in the day while the moon glows in the night? Why we have so many tall trees? Why we have more forests than houses? These are questions of the beginning of things like the Christians' myth of creation.

The first set of beings to occupy the earth were huge in size. They were as huge as rocks and tall like hills. They had large eyes, their teeth were as sharp as the edges of a razor, and very strong. They had tough skins and were great in height. These set of beings are till today known as giants. During this period the giants did not know how to swim nor stay inside water due to their huge size. So, they took their bath every time the rain fell.

These giants lived on a very beautiful island surrounded by a beautiful garden. In the garden was a very big Ocean, where huge fishes bigger than whales lived. It also consisted of giant animals which are known as Dinosaurs. The Dinosaurs were both wild and domestic animals which in some times served as a threat to the giants and at some other time served as food and tool of work.

The giants had seven different clans, and each clan had its own head, called the Ymir. The Ymir managed the activities and affairs of its own clan and every member of the clan took orders from him. This era of giants was full of love, peace and harmony and they all lived a very adventurous life for thousands of years.

Like every good, natural and evolving community, there was a year the giants were faced with over population. This was due to massive increase in their birthrate and it led to the insufficiency of food, shelter and clothing, which were the giants basic needs. The giants were looking for all possible ways to find a solution to their problems, however, all their efforts were futile.

One day, all the Ymirs came together to discuss the way out of their problems. At the meeting, many suggestions and objections were raised. But Aduet, the Ymir of Tibesis, often considered the wisest of the Ymirs, raised the accepted suggestion. So they concluded that they knowledge to get rid of their problems. To get this knowledge they will need to go to the other side of island which everyone at that period believed to have some certain trees of knowledge however, they had been forbidden a before then not to ever visit that land in which the trees of knowledge grew. But caught between a rock and a hard place, they had no other options left for them in bag.

The land of knowledge was separated by a very big ocean. To get there, the giants needed to pass across this ocean through a certain bridge called the Rainbow bridge. It was called the The Rainbow Bridge because it had the seven colours of the rainbow. But unlike the rainbow, each of the seven colours led to the different colours of knowledge which the giants sought to put an end their problems. The blend of these colours would result into a balance knowledge of life. After vast number of deliberations on Tibesis' suggestion, the leaders of the clans came to the agreement that each clan should provide two representatives to set out on the journey. A male and female giants were to be their representatives, together they were all fourteen in number. Afterwards they immediately set out for the journey to the land of knowledge. These giants were to travel on their feet.

And after a very long walk, they arrived at the Rainbow bridge, from which they all dispersed into the assigned path of their own colour of knowledge.

journey took them days and nights before they hit the land of knowledge. Immediately they reached this land, they were on the lookout for the tree of knowledge. On seeing the tree, heavy with fresh fruits and leaves, they were filled with delight and mirth. They, in their respective places, jumped on each other. As stated in the instructions given to them at home, they were to pluck and eat a fruit each, and then set back home after they might have eaten the fruit.

They rushed towards the trees and plucked the fruits from the tree immediately and, without hesitation they ate eagerly. The fruit was so succulent, fluffy and sweet that they could not resist the urge to have another bite. They ate as many fruits as they wanted. While they did that, they got shorter and shorter and the tree grew further and farther away from them until they realised that their hands could not reach the tree anymore. They were filled with horror and panic, each scampering from one place to another, trying to understand what could have caused the sudden increase in the heights of the trees. So, they deserted the tree and decided to head back home. But more shock and horror descended on them when they discovered their legs and feet had grown smaller and the sky spread above them thousands of kilometres away.

They panic grew with rapid intensity in them and decided to find a way back home, quickly.. Unfortunately, they could not find the Rainbow bridge because of the decrease in their sizes and they were not able to walk for a long distance any longer. After several days of searching, all their efforts resulted into failure and they finally gave up the search.

Afterward, they decided to settle down in that each part of land in which they were stranded in. In each part of land, they erected shelters and started a new life. They had a quick recovery from the horror and panic that mounted on them since they realized they were incapable to go out of the land.

They were able to survive quickly and easily in that land because of the knowledge in which they had acquired. But their lives were imbalance, like a body resting on a spring, because they were not able to integrate the knowledge they acquired in the lands designated to them with those from another clans and the knowledge remained seperated in all the seven different part of the land in which each pair of the gaints settled in. Those lands are what have grown to become the seven continents in our contemporary world, which are all sperated by oceans. As for the other giants on the island, after they have all waited for a very long for the arrival of those stranded giants.

They assumed they were dead in the land of knowledge and therefore refused to search for them out of the fear that they might also end their lives while searching for them. They remained in the island and struggled for thousands of years to survive. But they all got wiped by famine which led to the extinction of all giants on the surface of the planet.

Keynote of this work: This work is an imagination which dwells on what could have been the cause of this type human kind, life and how problems is inevitable human's world, man's greed at time makes him loose something Worth much of value and finally the reason we have different set of human, continent which have slightly different culture and way of life and why some things are better in some part of the world and why no human could be an island of knowledge there will always be a need to have one another in order to have a balance world.

THE END
